As Norway's second-largest city and the gateway to the fjords, Bergen is rich in history and culture. Founded in 1070 AD, the city's architecture reflects its past as a key trading hub for the Hanseatic League, a powerful German merchant organisation in the 14th century.

If you have time before your ship departs, take a stroll through the UNESCO-listed Bryggen district, where colourful wooden wharfs line the harbour, now home to local artisans and cosy cafés. Just across the street, you'll find the Fish Market, a great place to sample fresh Norwegian seafood. As the ship departs Bergen at 8:30 PM, you'll sail along Hjeltefjord, following the same historic route once taken by the Vikings. The city was rebuilt in this striking style after a devastating fire in 1904, giving it a unique character. While in Ålesund, you may wish to visit Atlanterhavsparken, one of Northern Europe's largest saltwater aquariums, or simply wander the colourful streets and waterfront, soaking up the atmosphere. If you're travelling in spring or winter, you'll have most of the day to explore this beautiful town at your own pace.

As the evening approaches, the ship makes its final stop of the day in Molde, a town famous for its stunning natural scenery. On a clear summer evening, you may be lucky enough to witness the Molde Panorama, an awe-inspiring view of 222 mountain peaks across the fjord. Your next stop is Stamsund, home to one of Lofoten's largest fishing fleets. This area is busiest between January and April, when Arctic cod (skrei) migrate south from the Barents Sea to Vestfjord to spawn, creating a hub of fishing activity.

By evening, you'll arrive in Svolvær, the main town of the Lofoten Islands.
